Don't Be Surprised by Antidumping or Countervailing Duties

When the U.S. Government determines there has been harm to a U.S. industry because a foreign industry used non-market or predatory pricing practices or a foreign government subsidized its exports, it has the authority to assess punitive antidumping (AD) or countervailing (CVD) duties. These duties can be crippling to the unsuspecting importer. Some combined AD/CVD orders exceed 400%. AD/CVD is one of the more obscure areas of international trade. It can be challenging to detect if your good falls within scope of one of the many AD/CVD orders. It is not difficult, however, for an unscrupulous trading partner to co-opt you into evading the system.

Screen your goods before you incur AD/CVD duties!

Rely on JD Goodrich & Associates for AD/CVD Reviews

In 2016 Congress gave CBP additional authority to investigate evasion of AD/CVD duties. The new regulations put U.S. importers on the defensive to demonstrate that their imports are not within the scope of existing AD/CVD orders.

AD & CVD Indicators:

Your company could be at AD/CVD duty risk if:

- The price seems too good to be true.
- Your company does not screen goods for AD/CVD prior to placing orders.
- You are unfamiliar with the detailed product specification of the goods you purchase.
- Goods are offered through unusual origins that previously were not considered sources.
- The vendor is vague about the source of actual production.
- Vendors from countries subject to AD/CVD orders begin offering goods through other countries.
- The volume of the transaction exceeds the known production capacity of the origin manufacturer.
